STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

SUBJECT: Jeroboam's idolatry-I. Kings 12: 25-33. GOLDEN TEXT: Keep yourselves from idols.--I. John 15:21.

By Rev. J. E. Gilbert, D. D., Secretary American Society of Religious Education.

CONTEXT.—The division of the kingdom into two parts, Israel on the north and Judah on the south, effected under circumstances described last week, presented two sovereigns who naturally felt jealous of each other. Rhehoboam, the King of Judah, corsidering himself the auccessor of Solomon, his father, was disposed to claim all the country, and he assembled the chlef men and proposed to recover by force the ten tribes who had rebelled. But this was contrary to the Divine will as announced by Shemalah, the man of God. Hence, the preparations for war were absandoned and the people returned to their homes to engage again in the ordinary pursuits of peace. Then began a new career for the chosen people. Each nation had opportunity to display its loyalty to God and to work out its coefficient many proposed to the first act of Jeroboam, King of Israel, was to fix his capital. Jerusalem continued to be the seat of government for Judah. Shechem was built or rather rebuilt for the northern kingdom. This lay between Mount Ebal and Mount Gemizim, near the place.

of Jeroboam, King of Israel, was to fix his capital. Jerusalem continued to be the seat of government for Judah. Shechem was built or rather rebuilt for the northern kingdom. This lay between Mount Ebal and Mount Genizim, near the place where Joshua encamped after the invasion preparatory to the conquest. Shechem had been a very important place in patriarchal history, lying midway between the Jordan and the great sea. It was utterly destroyed by Abimelech in 1266 B. C. (Judges IX:45) and so remained in ruins until Jeroboam's time. Crossing the Jordan, Jeroboam selected a second residence in the tribe of Gad on the site of a city in the time of Jacob. (Gen. residence in the tribe of Gad on the site of a city in the time of Jacob, (Geu. NXXII:30-31) which had been destroyed by Gideon. (Judges VIII:17.) This he rebuilt, and it is probable that in both cities he erected palaces. By this method he expected to gain favor with the people in both the eastern and western portions of his kingdom. All this was wise and proper.

STRATEGY—(Verses 26 and 27).—Jeroboam was a shrewd, but worldly statesman; he knew how to manage the affairs of public interest so as to strengthen himself in the kingdom. His two residences being established, he next reflected that the Item of religion was of great n the fiem of religion was of great moment. The people had become accustomed on certain occasions to go up to Jerusalem from all parts of the land. There stood the temple and there were observed the various religious ceremonies. All this tended to national unity. With plous regard for the religious customs of their fathers, all men had faithfully repaired year after year to the place dearer than all others. There they had commingled, talked freely of their common origin and destiny. (Deut. XII:5-6.) All this, moreover, was by Divine command. Jeroboam saw plainly that it would be impossible for him to maintain the kingdom which had been set up if this practice continued. Sooner or later the people would return to their old allesiance and he would be put to death.

EXPEDIENT—(Verses 28 and 29.—He did not take long to find a way out of The people had become accustomed on ce-put to death.

EXPEDIENT-(Verses 28 and 29).—He did not take long to find a way out of this embarrasing condition. The simplest plan was to change the national religion, and that course was adopted after due consultation with the state officials. It was resolved to return to the religion of Exypt. By so doing they would be wholly separated from Judah and they would more easily gain sympathy of the Exyptan court, forming an allance of great value. The religion of Exypt, moreover, appealed to the Israelites, because it presented something visible to be worshipped. The fathers had returned to it. CEX. XXXIII:4) in the time of Moses. A pretext was also made that the journey to Jerusalem was too great. To save the time two places were appointed and calves of gold were net up, one in Bethel, in the southern part of the kingdom, and one at Dan, in the northern part. To make all this acceptable the royal proclamation declared that these were the Gods that brought Israel out of Egypt, an appeal that would be likely to meet popular response.

APOSTASY+(Verse 20).—Jeroboam evithat would be likely to meet popular fersponse.

APOSTASY-(Verse 30).—Jerobeam evidently expected, his people would follow his advice and example, and he had good reason to expect it. There was the disposition of the multitude, then as always in all lands, to regard those in authority, on which he might count. Besides, the rebellion was a popular movement, resulting in a new government, (1 Kings XII:19-70) which every one would be glad to support, and every new measure in that interest would find favor. And so Israel turned away from Jerusalem to worship at Dan, making pilgrimages northward instead of southward, abandoning the aliars set up by Divine direction in the instead of southward, abandoning the al-lars set up by Divine direction in the city of David, abandoning also the hones long cherished and the aweet memorica-of the years long past. It is probable that a few of the more plous souls ad-hered to the ancient faith and worship, (I Kings XIX:18), but the defection was quite general. This first ruler of the northern kingdom went into history as the cause of the apostasy. (2 Kings XVII:21). PRIESTHOOD—(Verse 31).—By Divine

the cause of the apostasy. (2 Kings XVII-21.)
PRIESTHOOD—(Verse 31).—By Divine order one of the sons of Jacob and his posterity were separated from secular to hely pursuits. The sons of Levi were appointed to the priesthood. Whatever other purpose was served by this method, two ends were gained,—the men knew and all knew who should fill those positions, and they were trained accordingly. That did not prevent a prophetic office and ministry, regulated by the call of the Holy Spirit. (Isa. Il-1.) It merely provided for those stated and uniform services which were appointed in connection with the sacrifices. The priesthood continued in Judah as it had been established centuries before, but Jeroboam, in harmony with his purpose for a new national religion, instituted a new order,—he made priests of the lowest of the people, those of humble origin and or less repute. This action on the part of the king led the Levites who were in Israel to go to Jerusalein. (2 Chron. XI:14-15.) To complete his wicked policy Jeroboam erected temples for the new worship he had set up.

ples for the new worship he had set up.

SACRIFICE-Verse 22)—The origin of sacrificial worship is unknown. There are some who think that it was instituted by the Almighty, while others believe that it came through the natural impulse of the human heart. One thing is certain, that it appeared very early in the history of the race (Gen, IV 4.) It was continued all through the patriarchal despensation and became a prominent feature in the institutes of Moses. (Gen, XXIII:13, [EX. XXIX:18.) It was also common in the Pagan world. (I Kings XVIII:13.) Jerobam therefore introduced sacrifices into the system of religion which he set up the must have known that this was necessary in order to retain his hold upon region of the to retain his was necessary in order to retain his hold upon the people. The golden calves at Bethel and Dan, visible signs of a divinity toward which all men instinctively turn, twould not have been acceptel as worthy

CONCLUSION.—Here we have the secret of Jeroboam's conduct, the formalive principles of his character. He was centered in self. He built around the one dominating thought of his own interests. What he desired was, not faithfulness in office, not the welfare of the people who had called him to rule, not the advancement of the cause of truth and righteousness in the earth and the overthrow of oppression and wrong, but the establishment of his own power, the preservation of the government in his own hands. In order to do that he was willing to pervert the faith, to change the customs and manners, to appoint unworthy persons to minister in a degrading form of worship, to take to himself the dignities of the holy office, and so by his own example to lower the standards and ideals vample to lower the standards and ideals of his subjects in those matters that are eminently sacred. Solfishness and ego-lism clothed itself in idolatrous forms and heathen practices and turned back the civilization of the world for centuries. We unto the wicked and ambitious

TO EXAMINE TEACHERS.

Conditions of Awarding Certifi-

Conditions of Awarding Certificates to Applicants.

Uniform examinations for teachers for the public schools of the State will take place next week in every county and city. The examinations for white teachers will be held on Tresday and Wednesday, and for colored teachers on Thursday and Friday. The examinations on the first day will embrace history, geography, grammar and civil government, and on the second day the subjects for examination are arithmetic, physiology and hygiene, theory and practice of teaching, spelling and reading.

There are three grades of teacher's certificate, based upon the standing made in these examinations. Applicants must average 85 per cent, and not below 60 per cent, on any study in order to win a first grade certificate. An average of 55 without falling below 50 on any subject will entitle a teacher to a second grade certificate, while for the third grade an average of 65 per cent, and above 46 on any subject will entitle the applicant to a third grade certificate.
